Planned Gifts can enable a donor to:

- Increase their income
- Reduce taxes
- Make a generous gift to a charitable organization.

A donor provides the gift now and the organization benefits sometime in the future.

There are a variety of types of Planned Gifts. One should speak with their lawyer or financial advisor to determine what would best meet the donor's desired outcomes and benefits. These are several of the more popular Planned Giving arrangements:

Charitable Bequests are provisions in a person's will that specify money or other assets to be designated for a particular organization. This type of charitable gift is not included in the donor's taxable estate.

Beneficiary Designations allow for a charitable organization to be listed as a beneficiary of retirement plan benefits and/or IRA's. This will help avoid both federal estate taxes and income taxes if the designation states that the benefits are made payable at death to the specified charitable organization. Life insurance policies may also be contributed with a Beneficiary Designation.

Charitable Gift Annuities establish a contract between a donor and an organization, whereby a donor gives a gift of money, and in return, the organization guarantees to pay an annual amount for the lifetime of one or two people. Annual payouts are fixed and cannot be changed, and payout rates could vary according to the age(s) of the beneficiary. The Vision Resources Annuity Fund is managed by Everence Financial Advisors. A Deferred Gift Annuity is similar, but the payments are deferred until a later time, often at a specific age.

Vision Resources of Central Pennsylvania
